"I allude particularly to the charge of corruption in public office in police affairs. The law in this State allows the Police Commissioners to make certain rules and regulations for the government and discipline of the police force. Those rules and regulations are made for the purpose of preserving the good order of the police among themselves principally. There is a higher law than theirs on the statute books, which also prescribes the penalties for those persons derellet or corrupt in the administration of their office.

No State or government can long tist where such matters are tolerated. It is that those tubic servants who have been intrusided with the responsibility for keeping and preserving the public peace should be restrained and punished when they, themselves, offer immunity for crime, than that mere street urchins who committee of course, will be easily checked and punished by lesser magistrates, should be dealt with by the Grand Jury?
